Unique Method Used to Express Dissatisfaction With War Department Officials.

The second annual ball of the Redwood City Fire Company was given on the evening of May 14th, and as dancing had been prohibited in the hall at the Courthouse, the large room in the Ackerson building, much more commodious than the dancing filoor at the Courthouse, was secured for the purpose. To make the floor suitable for dancing it was covered with canvas, while the room was elaborately decorated with evergreens, flags and firemen's emblems—even the fire engine itself being taken into the hall for the purpose of adding realism to the surroundings. Although the hall was a large one it was crowded with dancers, and the affair was noted as a great success, both socially and financially. The arrangements for this dance were in charge of a committee consisting of G. W. Fox, William Callaghan and John Ames.

The first evidence of a live military spirit was shown in the latter part of May, when a public call was made for a meeting to be held at the Courthouse for the purpose of taking steps for the formation of and independant cavalry company. While this meeting was attended by a considerable number of people and some little enthusiasm was shown, no immediate results were obtained. The meeting was not entirely without results, as several months after a company such as that described was organized as a direct result of this conferrence.

In these days it evidently did not require that one should be possessed of any great fortune to enable him to invest in town lots in Redwood City. Although the Stambaugh addition was then considered one of the eligible residence sites, lots were advertised for sale at $60 each, and even at this price there was no great rush of investors.

Evidently no heed was paid to the severe scoring of the county jail by the grand jury some time previons to this, and the old shack was still keeping up its reputation as a good place to confine a prisoner—if it was desired that he should not be detained too long. The jail still continued to keep well up in its reputation, as is evidenced by the fact that on Sunday afternoon, May 28th, two more prisoners made their escape. These men were Eptfano Beronda and H. N. Wadsworth, both being held for trial on charges of horse stealing. The men in some manner managed to secure a small rod of iron, with which they pried off their shackels and dug through the walls. It was generally supposed that the men had obtained help from the outside, as there was no instrument of the character used within the jail. The escapes were never captured, though Wadsworth was later sent to San Quentin from another part of the State. The grand jury was again in session at the time of this escape, and at the time of their final report exonerated the Sheriff from any blame in the matter, and characterized the place as practically unfit for the purpose for which it had been built—recommending that an architect be secured to make plans for suitable apartments for the safekeeping of prisoners. At this time one man was arrested for crime and did not make his escape from the jail—because the courts and officers were too quick for him. On the same evening that the two prisoners made their escape, Deputy Sheriff Kieth, assisted by several citizens, arrested William Thornton, a suspicious looking individual who had been prowling about the town for some time. When searched at the jail he had on his person a number of burglar's tools and some articles taken from a saloon in the town which had been robbed one night about two months previous. It was not intended to trust him long in the jail, and the grand jury being in session he was indicted on a burglary charge growing ont of the saloon robbery on Tuesday. On Wednesday he was tried on this chorge and convicted, and on the following morning was sentenced to four years in the State prison and the same afternoon started for San Quentin.

On the evening of July 8th the officers of Bay View Lodge, I. O. O. F., the first to be elected for a full term since the institution of the Lodge, were installed, the ceremonies being conducted by Deputy Grand Maseer J. A McClelland. The new officers were: J. W. Turner, noble grand; S. H. Snyder, vice grand; E. C Southworth, recording secretary; William Holder, permanent secretary; G. W. Fox, treasurer. The reports of the officers showed that the membership of the Lodge had been increased to 50. During the few months since its institution the Lodge had expended something over $1400 in the building and furnishing of its hall and the purchase of regalia, and still had a neat balance in its treasury.

The fourth of July was generally celebrated throughout the couutry in an enthsiastic manner. In this city a very considerable number of the people had announced their intention to attend the celebration in San Francisco, and for this reason no advance preparations had been made for a special observance of the day here. During the early part of the afternoon, however, a number of the gentlemen who had remained at home got together and and decided not to allow the day to pas without some recognition. An impromptu program was arranged, with patriotic music provided by a choir of ladies. H. A Schofield presided at the exercises, A. Teague read the Declaration of Independence, and C. N. Fox delivered an oration mainly dealing with the rebellion and its sympathizers. In the evening there was a display of fireworks which had been hastily provided. At Halfmoon Bay there was an unusually big celebration, beginning with a National salute and the raising of a handsome new flag by the Union League. This was followed by a very elaborate program of literary exercises.

Appropo of the National celebration, the Gazette in its issue of July 10th pu[illegible] heading of "A Prayer For Our Country," the following, which seems to have conveyed some strong hints of the prevailing feeling: "Father of Mercies and Supreme Ruler of the Universe and all the nations thereof, we humbly beseach Thee to look with compassiou upon our beloved country in the hour of her greatest peril, and while Thou dost—as we fully believe Thou wilt—save us from the machinations of our declared enemies in the field, wilt Thou also save us from the manifold evils which befall and threaten us from the blockheads and traitors in our own councils and camps. To that end, wilt Thou be pleased, in Thine abundant mercy, to remove—by death or otherwise—the Commander-in-Chief of our army, and also Bombastes, who fills the chair which should be held by a Secretary of War, and then give to the President of these United States wisdom from on high to fill these places aright, and courage to hang all the men in the army who are serving their counry for mere intrinsic value, and all the thieving contractors who fatten on the blood of our soldiers. Then will the millennium of war arise and victory again perch upon the banner of our Union; and to Thee will we ascribe the honor, the power and the glory forever—Amen."

At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors on August 3d the county was divided into the new supervisor districts as required by the law fixing the number of Supervisors at five. The lines of the new townships were not settled until after a considerable contention in the Board, the arguments lasting nearly an entire day, the arrangement being fought at every step by a minority composed of Supervisors Ames and Selleck, and when the order was finally put to a vote, these two voted against its adoption. The boundaries of the new townships were as follows: Township one, to be called San Bruno Township—Congressional township 3 south, range 5 west and 3 south, 6 west. Township two, to be called San Mateo Township—Congressional township 4 south, range 4 west, and township 4 south, range 5 west, except that part embraced in the Denniston ranch. Township three, to be called Pulgas Township—all that part of townships 5 south, range 2 west, and 5 south, range 3 west, lying in San Mateo County; township 5 south, range 4 west, and that part of township 6 south, range 3 west lying in this county and within the Pulgas Rancho. Township four, to be called Redwood Township—Congressional townships 6 south, south, range 4 west, and 7 south, range 3 west, lying within tne county, and all of township 6 south, range 3 west, not included in the Pulgas Rancho. Township five, to be called Halfmoon Bay Township—all of the remainder of the county. Apparently this division cut the county into as nearly as possible even districts at the time, popolation and area being considered.

At the district school meeting for this town, held August 1st, the new trustees elected were Dr. S. S. Stambaugh, J. L. Snow and E. C. Southworth. During their term of office this Board was confronted with the settlement of the school lot problem and the building of a new school house.

Where Rests the Responsibility?

The coroner's jury called to inquire into the death of Miss Caroline Brasch, bookkeeper for Gray Brothers, could hardly have done less than charge the unfortunate laborer, Cunningham, her confessed slayer, with the crime of murder, yet it seems well that they should have qualified their verdict with a scathing denunciation of the system pursued, not alone by the Gray Brothers, but numerous other firms throughout the State of California, in dealing with their unfortunate employees. This infamous system has but produced a result that was to have been expected, and that might have as well happened years ago.

Goaded to murderous frenzy by this infamous "pay check" system, suffering the pangs of hunger because he was unable to collect his hard earned due, this unfortunate man deliberately took the life of an innocent employee of the firm, who from her own necessities was forced to submit herself as a target for the disappointments of hundreds of men in similar circumstances.

There is now just indignation throughout the State over the methods pursued by the Gray Brothers in the treatment of their employees, yet, as the San Francisco Star aptly observes, all the [illegible] check" system [illegible] not lay at the door of the Gray Brothers. They used the system because the California law does not prohibit that method of oppressing the poor laborer. But it is not California law that is most blameworthy. The laws of California are, theoretically, at least, the will of the people of California. It is the fault and the crime of the people of California that they have not prohibited the pay check system. They have failed in their plain duty to protect the laborers who are least able to protect themselves.

It is unfortunate that this young woman, merely the employee of this brutal concern, should have been made the victim of a system for which she was in no wise responsible. Her family and friends suffer for the sins of the Gray Brothers. But how do we know how many poor employees and families of poor employees have been made to suffer for the sins of these grasping concerns. It is not improbable that there have been suicides, that women and children have been made to suffer for the necessaries of life, and even that families have been broken up by the infamous system.

Whether it will be possible to prevent the danger of a reptition of this unfortunate affair by the temporary expedient of county legislation is probably a doubtful question, but it is certain that the next Legislature should enact such laws as will effectually put a stop to this infamous system that has already been productive of such baneful results.

Contemptible Business Methods.

The attempt of one of the members of the firm of Gray Brothers to justify the methods of that concern in its dealings with its employees, but "adds insult to injury." The statement that the "pay check" plan was ad[illegible]ed by the concern as the result of the financial stringency, but places them if possible in a worse light. It is simply an admission that the firm were endeavoring to compell men who were forced by the necessities of life to resort to the hardest and most degrading of labor to furnish a large portion of the capital upon which the firm transacted their business. For the purpose of avoiding the payment of interest upon the capital necessary to carry on their business they would compell the laborer to walk the streets hungry and ill clad, or perchance to see his children starve. No honest employer of labor would resort to such despicable trickery.

Mysterious are His Dispensations.

That the mysteries of the direction of the Great Arbiter of the Universe are beyond the comprehension of mortal knowledge was most forcefully illustrated by the sad dispensation which resulted the sudden ending of the life of young Norman Buck last Sunday morning. A young man, possessed to a more than usual degree with the higher and nobler atributes of life, returning from the holy duty of payings his devotions to his Maker, is suddenly and without warning called from a mortal life full of the promise of a bright future. The parent whose example and solicitude has contributed to the formation of this noble character is left disconsolate. Surely, God in His infinite mercy has some unrevealed wisdom in this seemingly severe dispensation.

The flower in ripen'd bloom unmatch'd
Must fall the earliest prey;
Though by no hand untimely snatch'd
The leaves must drop away:
And yet it were a greater grief
To watch it withering, leal by leaf,
Than see it pick'd to-day;
Since earthly eye but ill can bear
To trace the change from fowl to fair.

While it is realized that human sympathy can be of little avail in the sore trial that deprives the family of the companionship of one so dear, the Times-Gazette cannot refrain from tendering to Judge Buck its sincerest sympathy. May that Divine Love which "tempereth the wind to the shorn lamb," support and comfort him in this his hour of trial and desolation.

IN MEMORIAM.

Charles Frederick Adams.

DIED—At Corte Madera, Marin county, Cal., August 4, 1909, Charles F. Adams, son of the late James H. and Matilda Adams, and brother of John Q., William H., George W., Clara A., Lucy F., Susan A. and the late Cathella Adams, a native of Vallejo, Cal. A life member of the Society of California Pioneers and member of Apollo lodge No. 123, I. O. O. F., both of San Francisco; also of the Masonic order and B. P. O. Elks and the Arctic club of Seattle.

Of more recent years Mr. Adams was engaged in an official capacity in the hotel business of the Pacific Northwest—at the Rainier Grand and Hotel Diller, Seattle, Wash., and at the Hotel Dunsmuir, Vancouver, B. Caught in a Barrell.

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 13.—The story of how an affinity was trapped in a barrel dressed in scant attire, following an attempt to escape from the room of his wife, was told in a divorce complaint filed today by Phillip T Princevale against Ada L. Princevale.

Princevale alleged that he placed a row of barrels at the bottom of the rear stairway of his home when he found John Huey, a fellow drummer in the house with Mrs. Princevale. He then knocked on the front door, heard a big scramble within and soon after a scream as Huey landed in the barrel, having tripped over a rope.

When the husband rushed around to the rear he found Huey head first in the barrel with most of his clothing in his hands.He had trouble in extricating Huey.

Princevale at one time conducted a candy store here and was well-known in town. His wife, from whom he now seeks a divorce, worked for him and the pair lived here for some time after the marriage which took place at Monterey. He was the Call's agent at Redwood City. Mr. Princevale formerly resided at Gilroy where his ffamily is quite prominent.

SUDDEN DEATH ENDS PROMISING CAREER

Norman Buck is Fatally Injured While Returning from Church Services.

COMMUNITY MOURNS ITS LOSS

People of Redwood City and College Faculty Unite in Extending Condolence to Judge Buck.

The funeral of the late Norman Buck, son of Judge George H. Buck, the victim of the unfortunate accident of last Sunday morning, was held Tuesday morning from the family residence on Jefferson street. The last sad rites were attended by one of the largest concourses of people who have ever assembled on a similar occasion in this city. Not only did the numerous friends of the family in this section gather with one accord to pay homage to the memory of the beloved boy and to extend sympathy to the bereaved family, but numbers came from elsewhere to contribute by their presence to this spontaneous expression of public sentiment over what is felt as a loss to the community, as well as a bereavement to the family, notably among the latter being a considerable number of the members of the faculty of Santa Clara College, where the young man had been an honored and beloved pupil.

From the time of his death until Tuesday morning, the remains of the dead boy rested at the home of his father, and there scores of friends had called to offer their tributes of friendship and affection and to bestow such human consolation as was possible to the bereaved one. As mute but touching evidences of this regard, the bier was completely shrouded with floral tributes, the handsomest contributions of nature having been culled by loving hands.

At 10 o'clock, after the bereaved family had taken final leave of all that was mortal of their beloved, the casket containing the remains of their classmate and friend was tenderly lifted by the young pall bearers: John Foley, John Curry, Leslie Winter, James McGrath, J. Hirst and Ray Brown and escorted to Mount Carmel Church, where the last sad rites of the Catholic Church were observed.

At the Church a Solemn Requiem High Mass was celebrated, with Father Sullivan as celebrant, Father Alloysius Raggio, S. J., as deacon, and Father Cornelius Deeney as subdeacon, assisted by a choir composed of Miss Hadler (leader), Mrs. Holden and Mrs. Coleman, sopranos; Mrs. Hanson, alto; and Prof. Carrington, tenor. At the conclusion of the Mass, Rev Father R. A. Gleason, S. J., President of Santa Clara College, delivered a short but eloquent sermon, replete with words of consolation and eloquent with tribute to the college life and young manhood of the dead youth.

Father Gleason reminded his hearers that upon this earth we have no lasting abiding place, but are merely prepared for that eternal home that is to come. As the early Christians were reminded by the great Apostle Paul, that this world was not their final home, so must we remember that as we came from God, so must we return to God with the stewardship given unto us. That be the journey short or long, it has but one final end, the true home with our Heavenly Father. This world is filled with trials and disappointments, and be our journey long or short, we should avoid the dangers of fixing our hearts upon the dross of the earth, but rather to contemplate the joys prepared for us in Heaven.

As St. Paul bid the early Christians to console themselves in trial and affliction with these thoughts, so should we when our hearts are torn with trials and tribulations turn to God, the only true consoler. Human words of sympathy can have but little avail in the hours of our deepest suffering, it is then that we must turn to God, the only true comforter.

We have come today, said Father Gleason, to pay our tributes of respect to the dear and beloved dead; we have come to join our prayers that God may give Eternal rest to his soul. The best comfort we can receive in this hour of bereavement is the knowledge that God knows all things and cares for His creatures with a love surpassing that of a father or a mother; that He best knows when we should go to the Eternal home and lay down the trials and dangers of this earthly life. The final summons is not one to be dreaded, should we but be ready to answer the call, let it come when it may. May we not console ouselves with the memories of the pure and innocent life of this clean hearted boy who was ever so humble, so good Here, where his boyhood had been passed, it would be needless to attempt to recount these many sterling and admirable traits. At Santa Clara College, where the last years of his student life had been spent, he was revered and loved by all. Both his tutors and fellow student would fondly cherish his memory.

We may be consoled by the knowledge that God knows all things. He knows the hour of our greatest danger even when we are flattered by the most blandishing of promises. Thus has He taken this boy in his innocence and purity from the dangers and trials of the world. He had come from the altar of his God, and had been called to meet the Master he had served. We lay him to rest with the rites of the Mother Church, consoled with the faith that he will rise again. What greater homage can we pay our Maker than to bow to the will ofHeaven, with the prayer, "Thy will be done, not mine."

At the conclusion of the services at the church, the remains were taken to Menlo Park, where they were laid to rest in Holy Cross Cemetery. Here again was another exhibition of love and sympathy, the funeral cortege being of unusual length

The accident which resulted in the death of young Buck was one of the saddest in the history of this city. He had attended, as was a custom, the early services at Mount Carmel Church, and with the dismissal of the congregation, was hurrying to his home. As he approached the railroad crossing, he found the gates down and the northbound train passing. When the train had passed Norman, failing to see the south-bound train that was rushing toward him, and not hearing its warning bell on account of the train that had already passed, attempted to cross. He had reached the center of the track when the engine was almost upon him. Those who saw the accident say that the doomed lad made a frantic effort to save his life but he was too late. The engine struck him and hurled him away from the track against a bulkhead where he lay crushed, insensible and dying. His bicycle was twisted into a shapeless mass. The train was brought to a quick stop and among those who alighted was a physician who rendered what assistance he could. The news spread like wild fire and Drs. Ross and Barret and Taggart were soon at the scene but it was plain to all that earthly power could not avail to save the boy's life. Rev. Father Sullivan came quickly and gave the last rites of the church. In the mean time Judge Hannon hastily summoned Judge Buck from his home and the broken hearted father arrived in time to take his dying boy in his arms and witness his passing away. The body was taken in charge and removed to the home on Jefferson street.

Norman Buck was a native of Redwood City, where he was born February ninth 1893, and was the only son of Judge George H. Buck. Deprived of a mother's love and care in his infancy, he has been more than usually the affectionate care of his father, who has made his son the recipient of the care and love bestowed usually upon both a wife and child. Thus was he more than ordinarily endeared to the father, who has devoted the best years of his life to the training of the child.

From his infancy, young Norman has exhibited more than ordinarily bright and studious traits, and in him was the promise of a man of mark among the best of his fellow men His first education was obtained in the public schools of this city, where he early exhibited those studious habits which marked his career in school In 1906 he graduated from the grammar grades in this city, standing the highest in his class. Following this he entered Santa Clara College, where his course was marked by the same studious traits, and where his remarkable abiliites began to more prominently develope. Although but a mere youth he had already mastered the classics, and achieved an excellent record in mathematics, literature and oratory. Especially had he shown a marked aptitude in literary fields and even this early in life was the author of a number of notable productions, both in prose and poetry. At the College his studious habits and marked trates of character and kindly disposition had endeared him to his tutors as well as his classmates. Especially was this true of those of the faculty with whom he came in closer contact, and these are fervent in their expressions of admiration and love.

The following poem, written by himself and the last to be published before his death, may serve as his own epitaph:

The Prospector

'Tis a grassy tent stretched o'er him
  And the poppies bloom above
While the lillies bending o'er him
  Weep their dewey tears of love.

Standing guard above his bower
  Is a single mossy stone—
'Cross its face there climbs a flower
  Clinging to the word, 'Unknown.'

There the wild bee mourning o'er him
  Sadly hums a lullaby,
While she drains the flowers o'er him
  And the breezes softly sigh.

He's alone upon the mesa
  But his God is watching nigh,
Though he sleeps upon the mesa
  Sentinel stars watch from the sky.

Not was his of earthly glory,
  But the wild things mourn their own—
Though his name rests not in story
  It has found a purer throne.

Not was his the tender bedside
  Nor companion's sigh at death
Couch was his, the grassy hillside
  Where the vultures wait for death.

Vultures saw the dyed grass stooping
  With the life tide of his brest—
Vultures saw him stricken, drooping
  Drooping to eternal rest.

Coyotes watched him in the darkness
  Cowards waiting his doom—
But his body, not yet lifeless
  Chilled and stiffened in the gloom.

Yet the feeble spark still fluttered
  As the full moon climed the sky
While the feeble moans he uttered
  Seemed a prayer that he might die.

Then their came a low soft swishing
  As of horses treading grass
And a man's voice softly singing
  To the night winds as they pass.

Madly up the wanderer starded
  Wtth a wild light in his eye
From his throat a hoarse cry startled
  All the echoes to reply.

Then he staggered weak and weary,
  Faint his ear cought the reply,
Saw a home and fireside cherry
  Swim before his glazing eye.

Then he fell upon the green sward
  As his wounds broke forth afresh,
And his soul sped swiftly homeward
  From its prison in the flesh.

Now he's throned upon the mesa,
  With the wild things weeping nigh;
On the fragrant, grassy mesa,
  There beneath the western sky.

One rude stone stands guard above him,
  With the single word, "Unknown."
At his head and bending o'er him
  Clings a flower to the stone.

HEED THE WARNING

Many Redwood City People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are sick they give unmistakeable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days oof suffering may be saved. Sick kidneys expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brick-dust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired languid feelings and frequent rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only; they cure sick kidneys, and rid the blood of uric poison. If you suffer from any of the above symptoms you can use no better remedy.

Redwood City people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. H. Bridgewater, living at 210 Jackson st., Redwood City, Cal., says: "I suffered severely from pain across the small of my back and it was with me no matter what position I assumed. I was also subject to attacks of dizziness and my general health was in a much run down condition. Learning of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box at P. A. Ryan's drug store and used them according to directions. They proved to be just the remedy I required and before long I was well and strong again."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
